Stokesay

Stokesay Primary School is proud to be an extremely inclusive and diverse school. Our pupils and families come from a wide variety of backgrounds, and our curriculum design and implementation reflects this. We have close links with the local mosque as well as the local church (St Andrews). One of our school governors is the local Imam, in fact.

We welcome pupils from the local Long Lane site and a growing number of children learning English as an additional language. This rich and varied mix of backgrounds and cultures is something we rightly celebrate, as it helps all of our children learn to celebrate difference and learn about others with life experiences that may differ from their own. Everyone is welcome, everyone is valued at Stokesay Primary School.
